Death Calls Perley P. Sheehan

End Comes to Noted Author-Journalist as His Valadiction is Printed

Perley Poor Sheehan's body was racked with pain and he was at death's door when he wrote his last newspaper copy—"The Watch Tower," for last week's issue of the Sierra Madre News. In just a little more than 24 hours later as the paper containing his column was coming off the press early Thursday morning he passed into "the next room" to which he referred in his column several weeks ago. He knew as he wrote the words "soon—none too soon nor yet too late," that the end was near. He felt it was so near that once when he was interrupted while writing he said, "I'd better be getting on with this if I am to finish it.

His great soul and his philosophy had carried Perley Sheehan cheerfully through many trying weeks during which he knew he was doomed to die. He was prepared and unafraid. His one concern was the parting with those he would leave behind, for he was a generous, kindly man and had a deep affection for those who enjoyed his friendship. Firm in his convictions he conceded the right of those who disagreed with him to have their own opinions and it was because of this that he carried on Sierra Madre's Forum so that all and sundry might meet and exchange their views on public questions that absorbed the people in the middle thirties.

Born in the suburbs of Cincinnati, Ohio, Mr. Sheehan began what proved to be a great career in journalism and as an author on the newspapers of nearby Hamilton, Ohio. From there he went to the Cincinnati Enquirer and eventually to New York and the New York Herald, then one of the world's greatest newspapers, with its own news bureaus in all of the European capitals and its own correspondents in the principal cities throughout the world. This was before the great news associations had perfected their great world coverage systems and the Herald carried not only more cable, but more telegraphic news than any other American publication. Its foreign service centered in Paris and the Herald published a Paris edition.

Mr. Sheehan's ability and his quick grasp of world affairs attracted the attention and admiration of Col. James Gordon Bennett, Herald publisher, and he was made head of the telegraph department where he soon made so good that he was sent to Paris as editor of the Paris edition of the Herald, in which position he co-ordinated the foreign news for the New York edition. Sitting on this top rung of the journalistic profession his work took him through all of Europe, Asia and Africa. He had a marvelous grasp of world affairs. And as he traveled he studied, and read greedily.

When Col. Bennett died Mr. Sheehan became head of the foreign bureau of the New York Times, then in the ascendancy, with headquarters in Paris. The

Memorial Service Sunday for Perley Poore Sheehan

Rev. John S. Neal, rector of the Church of the Ascension, will conduct a memorial service for the late Perley Poore Sheehan at the church at 4:30 Sunday afternoon. Dean Arnold Bode, intimate friend of Mr. Sheehan's, will preside at the organ and the choir will sing several anthems, including "Comfort, O Lord, the Soul of Thy Servant," by Croach. The service is being held at the request of intimate friends of the departed journalist and the suggestion of many of the townspeople who recognized his sterling qualities and his service to the community.

During the Kiwanis Club's observance of National Newspaper Week on Tuesday Dr. John L. Woehler paid tribute to Mr. Sheehan's character, ability and worth to the community and at the conclusion of the meeting as the members and guests stood, Dr. Arthur O. Pritchard said a memorial prayer.

Observations

By Lee Shippey

Perley Poor Sheehan had lived here less than 10 years but had made himself our city's best beloved citizen. He began by creating beauty in a run-down piece of property, took a lively interest in our library and the town forum which flourished while he was its leader, and his warm-hearted interest in our citizens, from children to aged persons, resulted iln his knowing more of us by our first names than most of our old timers do.

Perley could not go down any street in town without being affectionately greeted by young and old as he passed, and there are few of us who will not feel a sense of personal loss in his passing. He had been reduced from riches to comparative poverty before coming here but his philosophy showed that good will is more important than money in making one a valuable citizen. Though he cherished enough violent prejudices to make him human and perhaps more lovable than perfection could have made him, he was essentially a lover of mankind in the mass and of the individuals who make it up.

A few days before he died he told me he had never been so happy in his life as the warm interest the entire community took in him touched his heart many times a day. Those who read his weekly column in this paper know he was both an original thinker and one of the most broadly generous and benevolent of men, the possessor of a spirit which shed a light about him, no matter what tribulations and sufferings he had to endure.

WILSON HIGH ENTERS JEEP CAMPAIGN

The "triple threat" jeep campaign announced by the Treasury Department will be entered by Woodrow Wilson Junior High School students. The drive begins this month and ends December 7, after which qualifying schools will receive citations.

PERLEY POORE SHEEHAN

A Tribute from his Friend, Dean A. G. H. Bode

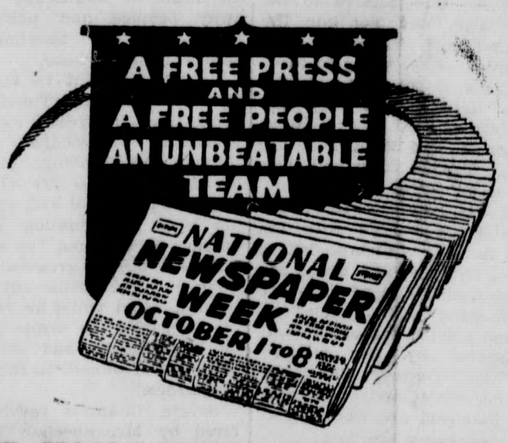

Sierra Madre will miss Perley Sheehan, and he will be long remembered by all who knew him. We shall miss his weekly column, with its kindly philosophy and mystic quality, its profound thought and poetic language, its Franciscan love of man and bird and beast and flower and tree and mountain. Perley's education was in the classical tradition. He was a scholar. His column provided a constant intellectual stimulus, with echoes from Greek and Latin writers, from the myths of ancient times, from the Hebrew prophets, from the sacred books of the East, from the Christ and the New Testament. He was deeply religious in his own way, with a keen sense of the Divine immanence in nature, and a feeling of the dignity and unity and brotherhood of the human family. Though his name is recorded in Who's Who, he does not mention his accomplishments there, modestly believing in equality and not superiority. He was a lover of his kind and content to be one of the family, and so he was lovable.

In his life and in his writings there was evident a devotion to the three absolute values which come to us from the Greeks—Truth, Beauty, and Goodness. To Truth in his willingness to see gleams of light in all religion, oriental and occidental, "rays" as he would say of the infinite religion which is God's Truth, or as the Bible says, of "the True Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

To simple goodness, in his home life, in his willingness to serve all good causes, in his kindness to the young, to Mexican boys, to anyone in need, in his thoughtfulness for others, even tired people toiling up Baldwin avenue, and for poor people everywhere. He stood for "goodness and mercy."

To beauty, in beautifying the old home which was in former times the village store and post office, making lovely gardens both back and front, with lawns and trees and flowers and a bird-sanctuary where he could observve with the eye of a modern St. Francis, the doves and mocking birds, the bluejays and

WHAT HOME-TOWN NEWSPAPERS MEAN TO AMERICAN CITIZENS

By Roy A. Brown
Past President, National Editorial Association

I am the guarantee to the American way . . . to the way of liberty . . . the way of equal opportunity . . . the way of free enterprise . . . the divine way and the true way for national well-being and upward advancement.

Dailiy and weekly I go into your home . . . in winter, in summer, in spring and fall.

I chronicle your birth, your marriage, your death and the intervening events which mean for joy and sorrow, depression and exaltation, health and pestilence, poverty and wealth, weakness and strength.

Freeborn am I, and true to my heritage. I am not the subservient carrier of propaganda that enabled a Hitler to become the master of Germany, nor am I the compliacent press that contributed to France's downfall.

I am a friendly visitor. You will find me constantly at your right hand day after day, at your fireside, on your porch swing, or at the breakfast table.

I have character, and even when I hurt, you would not have me spineless. . . .

I provide you with a special civic service. I support to the last drop of ink your charities, community chests, Red Cross drives, public schools, church activities, clubs . . . yes, I assist in the building of community character.

Through advertising, I promote your trade, move your commodities, advance your living standards.

For I am the American Home Town Newspaper, and without me your liberties would vanish.

HERE ARE THE REASONS WHY WE LIKE OUR HOME-TOWN NEWSPAPER

By DR. ALBERT A. SUTTON
Professor, Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University

Ask your next-door neighbor what he likes about his home-town newspaper.

He'll say that he likes it because it gives him the latest news of the men and women in his own community and their varied activities. It also furnishes him the most recent ration information and advises him about the weather and crop prospects; it helps to recruit workers for the farms and industries engaged in all-out war effort. This newspaper of his brings him news about his son or his neighbor's son on some field of operation halfway around the globe; it helps straighten out his thinking through well-written editorials with which he may agree or disagree.

Furthermore, this newspaper through its advertising columns, assists the whole family in their shopping and during the year it saves them many times its cost by directing them to the right merchandise at the right price.

But your neighbor may fail to mention the most significant fact of all. He'll seldom say that his newspaper is doing a magnificent job in its persistent day-by-day efforts to preserve and forward Democracy in this hour of peril—that its contributions are deep-rooted and far-reaching. He takes that for granted, too.

Like all the rest of us engaged in this war, whether or the battle-front or on the home-front, this next-door neighbor knows that his future and that of all of the rest of us depends on the combined, unselfish efforts of himself and of liberty-loving people throughout the world.

He knows that a free press and a free people are an unbeatable team and that victory for such a powerful combination is inevitable. Deep down in his own soul he knows these things and, like his newspaper, he is determined and willing to do everything in his power to hasten the peace that is sure to come. That's Democracy at work!

VITAL FACTOR IN FOOD PROGRAM

By MARVIN JONES
Administrator, War Food Administration

I am happy to add my word of appreciation for the Free Press of the United States. It is well, I think, in times like these that we call attention to the freedoms for which we are fighting. We have enjoyed a Free Press for so many years, that it is hard for us to imagine living under any other system, and yet we know that one of the first acts of a dictator is to muzzle the press. The press has given citizens great assistance in carrying through the wartime programs of producing, conserving and sharing food. We know this effective service will continue.

Three More Sierra Madreans Join Navy; Petty Officers Now

Three more well-known Sierra Madreans are in the Navy now and began a coast-to-coast trip to the Norfolk Navy Yard at Norfolk, Va., on Tuesday. All three begin their careers in blue jackets as Seabeees, with the rank of petty officers.

"Young Jim" Heasley, member of the fire department, former manager of the Union service station and son of Fire Chief James C. Heasley, starts off with the rank of machinist's mate 2c. Dennis Dempsey, who returned some time ago after helping build the American base on Attu island and later worked on Army installations in Idaho, goes into the service as a carpenter's mate, 2c, and "Joe" Tiller drew an assignment as steam fitter's mate 3c.

All three of the young men have been kept busy attending farewell parties in their honor for more than a week. They enlisted some time ago, passed their final examinations 10 days ago and will be assigned to active duty on their arrival at Norfolk.

Heat Holds On

Freedoms are Held Secure by the Press

People Think too Soundly to Allow Throttling of Newspapers, Kiwanis Told

Sierra Madre Kiwanians were given an insight into the aims and operations of American newspapers by Director Marc N. Goodnow of the School of Journalism of the University of Southern California as they observed National Newspaper Week at their luncheon meeting on Tuesday.

Always threatened, especially now with the centralization of governmental authority, Prof. Goodnow thought there was little real danger of abridgement of the freedom of the press, the basis of all freedoms, because the American people think too soundly to permit any such thing.

Introduced by L. R. Goshorn, publisher of the Sierra Madre News, Prof. Goodnow said:

"One of the prize possessions of a democracy is the freedom of the press, as well as freedom of speech. Both of these are guaranteed under the Bill of Rights and it is doubtful if they will ever be abridged because of the sound thinking of the American people. Invasions of those rights are often attempted, but always the newspapers are on their guard, and the public realizes that by any abridgement of free speech there would be an equivalent sacrifice in the whole political and social structure of the country.

"The newspapers, of course, are severely criticized for what sometimes is termed license, but when we realize that by being outspoken newspapers can safeguard the rights of the people in political and other ways, the criticisms are not nearly so serious. In the matter of sensational news which newspapers are so often accused of printing, it would amuse most people to know that sensational crime news in a newspaper is rarely more than 3% of its contents. The illusion grows out of the fact that most sensational news appears on page one and

Frantic Call for Aid to Red Cross

Workers Needed to Make Huge Supply of Bandages for Invasion Forces

Actual invasion of Europe and the onward push in the Pacific toward Tokyo have meant mounting casualty lists for U. S. armed forces that have caused the War Department to call frantically upon Red Cross chapters throughout the country for surgical dressings. One of these calls has just come to Sierra Madre's Red Cross unit, which has fallen behind the quota assigned it early in the year—before the invasion campaign got under way.

The need for dressings is desperate now and the War Department communication brought a plea from Mrs. William Colligan, chairman of the surgical dressings unit of the local Red Cross, to the women of Sierra Madre for help.

"Lend your hands and your time," she pleaded, "you are needed—desperately. Come to the Red Cross Rooms, 47 West Sierra Madre blvd., Wednesedays or Fridays between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., or Thursday evenings between 7 and 10 o'clock. Coveralls for workers are furnished at the workroom and head coverings may be borrowed there if necessary, or purchased for a nominal sum."

So great is the demand for surgical sponges that no other dressings are to be made from now to January 1, 1944.

Since July 15 when the department of surgical dressings was opened here under the leadership of Mrs. Colligan, total production has been 18,000 sponges of three different sizes; 118 different persons have given a total of 2185 hours of work. This is a good beginning but the quota set for Sierra Madre was 20,800 dressings by Octotber 1 and as this goal has not been reached, more Sierra Madreans are urged to allot at least two hours a week to increase production.

Life Saving Device Wins Prize for a Sierra Madrean

L. H. Quackenboss of Sierra Madre, project supervisor of the 58th depot of the Ferry Command at Long Beach, has just received a first award and a prize of $100 for devising a life-saving kit that will come into general use with the armed forces. He straightway invested the cash prize in a War Bond.

Old Orchard Camp to Be Destroyed

Councilmen Find Resort to Be Very Definite Menace to Community

Orchard camp in its present condition was found by Councilmen Bruce McGill and Vinton Hoegee to be a very real fire hazard—a threat to both Sierra Madre and the Angelus forest. As a result of which the old mountain resort now on city-owned property is to be destroyed, and soon.

Authorized by the city council to investigate a complaint by the U. S. Forest Service that the camp was a menace, and to take such action as they deemed necessary, the two councilmen went up to Mt. Wilson over the week-end and dropped down the mountainside into the camp.

"We found it was all the Forest Service complained about, and then some," Mr. McGill told the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday in calling for volunteers to go up and help tear down the buildings. "There are 18 buildings there that are a definite fire hazard in a very bad spot. They are filled with old mattresses and broken furniture. The grounds are littered with debris left by hikers and campers and the whole place is a disgrace to the city."

It had been hoped that some of the buildings might be saved as the camp grounds are to be turned over to the Boy Scouts as a training and recreation center. But the Scoutmasters say there is no need for buildings other than a structure that can be used as a mess hall. When the Scouts want to sleep there they can use their camping paraphernalia.

Mr. McGill hopes to recruit enough members of the Forest Fire Fighters Service, city firemen, Kiwanians and older Boy Scouts to raze all the buildings and clean up the camp so that it will be only a memory after Sunday, October 17.

City Exceeds Quota for Third Loan

War Bond Subscriptions Here Will Exceed $170,000 When Pledges are Met

Sierra Madreans oversubscribed their $165,000 Third War Loan quota by $5000, it was announced yesterday on the return of Dan C. Reib from Los Angeles where he checked with the Southern California War Bond Committee. And there are outsatnding pledges that will swell the total.

Just $142,000 worth of the bonds were sold in Sierra Madre, while $28,000 worth were subscribed for by local residents employed in Los Angeles and the defense plants and ship yards in Pasadena, Burbank, El Segundo, Long Beach, Wilmington and San Pedro.

Checking the local sales at noon yesterday the Sierra Madre committee was downcast, believing it had fallen $13,000 short of the quota. There was great joy, however, when Mr. Reib returned with the official figure which contained the audits for out-of town purchases.

"Our people have done splendidly again," said Mr. Reib. "It seemed on Saturday when we checked that we had fallen behind, but hope was not abandoned pending a complete report from the Block Mothers organization which did a really wonderful job in its house-to-house campaign. Apparently members of this organization sold approximately $20,000 worth of bonds. Many of these sales were for that extra bond so often mentioned by Secretary Morgentheau as so vitally necessary to meet the huge 15-billion-dollar national quota. These sales spelled the difference between falling short and going over the quota here as elsewhere. Had it not been for this personal solicitation so efficiently done by the Block Mothers, many of these extra bonds would not have been sold here. The committee and the community are deeply indebted to these patriotic women for they have seen to it that Sierra Madre has maintained its high standing.

"The committee has authorized me to very sincerely thank not only those who bought bonds and helped to maintain our enviable position, but all those who contributed in any way to make the 3rd War Loan campaign here a success. This success must be a matter of pride and satisfaction to every citizen of the community."

therefore seems to occupy more space than it actually does."

Goodnow referred to the growth of the freedom of the press by citing the case of John Wilkes, an Englishman who in 1763 opposed certain laws of the English crown and was tried for sedition and libel, being later exonerated. He became a member of the parliament and a leading factor in political affairs. In this country Peter Zenger, founder of the New York Weekly Journal, won one of the major victories for freedom of the press in the American colonies, and really paved the way for the Bill of Rights.

Goodnow traced the development of newspapers from the days of personal journalism through the building of large financial organizations and the employment of nationally known newspaper columnists and syndicate writers.

The most important contribution to American life, he contended, is being met by the weekly newspapers which in many ways are closer to their readers than any other type of publication. The weekly newspaper, he said is not sensational, it is clean and is published for every member o fthe family. It acts as a common center of information for the entire community for which it is published and in every way a community is much more likely to succeed and become a desirable place in which to live and do business with a weekly newspaper than without one.

"In addition to supplying the needs of the community for news and information of social or public interest," said Goodnow, "the weekly newspaper also provides the least expensive method for giving news of merchandise. Through the newspaper a merchant is enabled to reach practically every family in the community and tell those people about what he has to sell. In this modern day with so much out-of-town buying and so much inter-relationship between communities, the local merchant must get his stories before his prospective customers more frequently than ever before. Even with a scarcity of merchandise, the local merchant still has an obligation to himself and to his community to increase his own enterprise and increase his service. I am convinced that he can do the job more thoroughly through his local newspaper than by any other means and the extent to which he keeps in contact with the consumers through his newspapers invariably determine the degree of his success."

Woman Quits Bank Position to Fly in Ferry Command

With her husband, William, in the Navy, Mrs. Madeline Dewey could no longer suppress the desire to actively participate in the war effort. She decided to become a flyer and get into the Ferry Command. So she resigned her position as secretary to President Lewis of the Sierra Madre Savings Bank last Friday and went down to the boot camp at San Diego to tell William of her decision. It was okey with him—he was all for it.

So she is going to Reno, not to establish residence with the idea of securing a divorce, but to attend a flying school where she hopes to qualify for admission to the Command. She decided on the Reno school because it was recommended by her relative Lieut. "Jim" Dewey. She hope to get her wings and be ferrying planes in about six weeks.

CARD OF THANKS

So very many of the people of Sierra Madre have been so wonderfully kind and thoughtful during the trying weeks of my beloved husband's illness and since his passing on that I must take this means of assuring everyone of you of my deep appreciation. Your solicitude and many thoughtful attentions eased the final days of Mr. Sheehan's life. Your words and messages of sympathy and encouragement have comforted me greatly. I thank you all from the bottom of my heart. Sincerely, motion-picture industry was assuming immense proportions about this time and men with the intimate knowledge of faraway peoples and places possessed by Mr. Sheehan were needed in Hollywood.

He was brought to Hollywood from Paris and the Times a little more than 20 years ago. The wonderful knowledge acquired through his reading, plus that SHEEHAN—HED TO KUM . . acquired by travel and study and his great imagination made it possible to turn out the scenarios for some of the greatest productions that ever came out of Hollywood. And while he was writing scenarios he wrote a dozen or more books and contributed hundreds of stories to the leading magazines.

Severe financial reverses suffered by Mr. Sheehan following the crash in 1929 refined his nature instead of embittering him. Coming to Sierra Madre just a little less than 10 years ago he took over the house in which he died. It was run down and deserted then; the yard that is cool and green and full of flowers that received his loving care and that was his great comfort and joy during recent years and especially in recent months, was barren. He loved the simple and the beautiful things in life. Loyal to his ideals and his friends beyond the understanding of many, he detested snobbery and pomp and wished his ashes to go back to the earth in the simplest possible manner.

Mr. Sheehan is survvived by his wife, Virginia, to whom he was married in the Burgundy country of France 40 years ago, and three brothers, Murry, secretary of the Thai legation in Washington, D. C.; David, of Nashville, North Carolina, and Clyde, of New York.

He contributed his "Watch Tower" column in the News with few interruptions for almost nine years. It was given that title at the outset because he intended to comment on world affairs. Later he preferred to write his impressions of life and his column attracted readers from many sections of the nation and in Canada.

Perley Poore Sheehan was a fine man, a good man, a true American and a loyal friend.

woodpeckers, the linnets and orioles and the rest of the bird chorus, and draw whimsical yet profound comparisons and analogies for human thought and conduct. The beauty of his thought was akin to that of the two well-known mystics and nature-lovers, Maeterlinck of Belgium and Richard Jefferies of England. And his "love and reverence for all things God made and loves," brings to mind the words of Coleridge:

He prayeth well who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast.
He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small,
For the dear God who loveth us
He made and loveth all.

We shall remember Perley Sheehan for another addition to the beauty of our town—the garden surrounding the Church of the Asscension, which he made literally with his own hands and which he liked to call the Garden of St. Francis. Many have seen him planting the trees and shrubs and flowers, carrying and placing rocks and fragments of paving stones to the point of exhaustion in making the walks and steps, calling in the help of our good friend, Mr. Krauscher in constructing The Lych Gate, with its seats and its invitation to rest, and the other benches in the shade for the folks who need to pause in their climb up the hill. To the beauty of the garden he added the beauty of thoughtfulness for people.

And there was another side to Perley Sheehan. Some of us remember how at our City Forums, of which he became the humorous and dexterous chairman, he was always fearless and uncompromising in his denunciations of the inequties and injustices in the life of that time, and in his stand for social justice. To quote the Episcopal prayer-book: he "made no peace with oppression." Many of his ideas may be heard today in the speeches of the great. And some of us will remember the moral beauty of the calmness with which he faced the death which he knew to be imminent. He could speak and write of what he called "the Other Room." His thought was that you have not only a mortal self but also what he calls an elder deathless self which you really are, and which is on the threshold of "a next room, ever there, ever familiar, ever alive with the stir and whisper of the ones you've loved and whose love you feel, no matter the years and the continents and seas that may lie between. The Next Room is there. You have strayed into it in dreams and reveries, in memories and hopes and prayers. And when you come to ask, 'Is this, then, the hour of death?' you will find yourself on a familiar threshold, looking into a place you have always known and loved. In your heart there will be no fear, no mourning." These are the thoughts of a brave man. He would have no mourning over his entry into "the next room." Rather we can treasure happy memories of his life such as are here recalled, and memories which others may have.

On a wall in Salisbury Cathedral is an inscription which reads:

RICHARD JEFFERIES

who, observing the works of Almighty God with a poet's eye, has enriched the literature of his country, and won for himself a place amongst those who have made men happier and wiser.

The same might be written of Perley Poore Sheehan.

A decline of 2½ million passenger automobile registrations through the nation as of May of 1943 was disclosed this week. The figures were compiled from registration data in 30 States and the district of Columbia, an area which normally represents between 55 and 60 per cent of the total registrations of the country.

September marked the 12th year of World War II. Twelfth year? Yes, if you look back through the pages of your modern history book you will find that in September of 1931, the first major act of unprovoked aggression was perpetrated by the Tokyo war lords against China. On the excuse that they were seeking to destroy "communists" who had "sabotaged" a rail-line, the Nips overran all of Manchuria. We felt sorry for China, but went on doing business with Japan. The League of Nations "investigated," administered a verbal spanking, and Tokyo quit the League. It didn't seem to mean much—then. We didn't know what it would mean later: Ethiopia in 1935, Shanghai 1937, Austria 1938, Poland 1939, and Pearl Harbor 1941. We've learned a lesson, but the important thing is—to remember it!

The mounting problem of how small business can be saved from destruction because the country is preoccupied with war production apparently is headed for a solution, after some two years of abortive attempts to set up safeguards. The American Bankers Association has agreed to assist small concerns to fit themselves into the production of both war materials and essential civilian goods. Details have not yet been worked out, but some of the advantages are obvious. Often it is the local banker who knows the problems of individual communities better than anyone else. Moreover, they know the people who are in business, and since the A.B.A. has decided to decentralize its program, this will be of prime importance. The accusation has been made that the small enterprises which have received the most help from Washington have been those which could make the most noise. The local banker is not going to be impressed by noise; he knows the source. The bankers know, too, that mere advice is not always going to be enough. Their assistance will be valuable in many cases, but they realize that they cannot overcome situations where individual industries are not able to obtain supplies.

When the U. S. Treasury Department asked patriotic school children of the nation through extra effort to purchase War Stamps sufficient to buy 10,000 jeeps, the California quota was set at 755. The report just completed shows that Southern California students in 649 public, parochial and private schools more than quadrupled their quota, purchasing 3175 jeeps for the armed forces. Each school participating in the jeep campaign received the official United States Treasury Department Jeep Certificates, signed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

An increase of 143 per cent in number of wage earners, and a jump of 303 per cent in wages paid to California workers from 1939 to 1943 in all industries is revealed in a new economic survey issued by the Research Department of the California State Chamber of Commerce. During this same period, the report shows, the increase in number of wage earners for the nation as a whole was 48 per cent and the increase in wages paid was 135 per cent.

Reseults of a year's study of solar heating and "daylight engineering" by the Illinois Institute of Technology reveal that the world's oldest heating unit—the sun—may successfully be harnessed in post-war building to serve as an auxiliary source of winter warmth. The study of a solar home in the Chicago suburbs, brought out that rays of the sun, filtering through multiple-glazed windows—which sandwich a sealed-in, dehydrated air space between panes to form a type of glass known to engineers as thermopane—supplied enough heat, even in sub-zero temperatures, to make additional heating unnecessary during daylight hours. The engineers revealed that one January day, when outside temperatures ranged to 17 degrees below zero, the interior temperatures rose about 85 degrees with the furnace automatically shut off and not in operation between 8:30 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. A material reduction in fuel bills was reported.

Would you accept a generous serving of nice, tough asparagus ends? No? Well, maybe you will soon—and like it. Not that we've reached a point in the food situation where nothing else is available, but food chemists have found that these ends which used to be thrown out can be used to make puree for soup. They are also finding that broccoli leaves and stems can be processed and made palatable as cooking greens. These advances in food utilization indicate that there are many additional ways to get more from the products of the "good earth." Chemists can do much in finding ways to make greater use of food, but in the final analysis, it's up to us to see that none is wasted. Wasted food is wasted ammunition. Wasted ammunition helps the enemy.

Travelers Report a Hot Summer All Through the East

Everywhere Lieut. Commander J. W. and Mrs. Storm went on their trip diagonally across the continent to the extreme northeast coast of the nation, they either encountered hot weather, or heard about an uncomfortably hot summer—except in the Bangor, Maine, area. They returned Monday from their long jaunt to visit friends and relatives, breaking the trip with stops at Boston and Flint, Mich. The retired Navy man gorged himself with lobsters while at Bangor for the area thereabouts is where the world's finest specimens come from. The residents there, however, are peeved because this sea food is "high" now—from 40 to 50 cents apiece, right out of the cold Atlantic. The travelers suffered little inconvenience on the trains and report the dining service was almost up to par.

This Newcomer Has the Right Idea

John R. Witham looks like the making of a pretty good Sierra Madrean. A recent addition to the mechanical staff of the Sierra Madre News, he became interested in the progress of the city's Third War Loan campaign while setting the type for stories about the drive. So when he drew his first pay check he went straightway to the Sierra Madre Savings bank and invested it in a War Bond. "I buy some kind of a bond every time I'm paid," he told them at the bank, "and while one bond isn't much, I thought it would help bring the total here up a little and that it was the right thing to do—to spend your money where you make it."

Seven Basic Foods are Boosted by the War Council

For sound, robust health remember this rule: Eat some food from each of the basic seven groups every day, says the nutrition department of the War Council. And don't overlook group three which spotlights root vegetables.

Turnips, potatoes, parsnips, celery root, onions,—here's plain, substantial fare that's rich in important food elements. Root vegetables such as these keep well and are generally inexpensive. They supply minerals, some vitamins and are a fine source of carbohydrates. Here, too, is an excellent non-irritating roughage.

Cauliflower, kohlrabi, eggplant, beets, radishes, onions and celery are rich in minerals and nicotinic acid. Because they are low in fat, these root vegetables are good carriers for savory sauces which add both interest and calories to an otherwise plain dish.

Serve some food from group three every day. To break down your family's resistance to root vegetables, try these tricks. Use shredded beets or turnips as a salad ingredient or relish. Make a lima bean loaf with green pepper sauce. Serve cauliflower garnished with creamy cheese sauce. Try lentil soup and lentil patties. Creamed onions. Kohlrami washed with salt, pepper and butter or fortified margarine.

Girl Scout Notes

Members of the Sierra Madre Council of Girl Scouts were hostesses to 30 enthusiastic parents and friends who were on hand to greet Miss Dorothy Hande, executive director of the Pasadena Girl Scout Leaders, at the "social-get-acquainted" evening held at the home of Mrs. Sam Haskins Jr., last Thursday.

Miss Hande gave a very interestnig talk on "The Set-up of Gorl Scouts in the World Today." She will give a Girl Scout training course at the home of Mrs. Haskins, 171 W. Orange Grove ave., commencing Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m.

The first evening will be for all friends interested in Scouting, the following evenings to be devoted to the different age groups, Brownies, Intermediates, and Senior Scouts.

Anyone interested in this worthwhile work with the youth of our community is welcome to attend.

Mrs. H. S. Dodwing, publicity chairman.

Kiwanis Club Broadcasts Result of Its Inquiry Into Life of City's New School Superintendent

Evidently the Sierra Madre Kiwanis Club made inquiry into the life of Henry F. Korsmeier, the new school superintendent, as it does in most cases, before accepting him as a member. Then it broadcast its information in the club's wistaria-covered weekly bulletin, which is mailed to members before each meeting. Since there is apparently nothing libelous in the club's findings and the bulletin is not copyrighted, what it had to say about Mr. Korsmeier is reproduced, as follows:

"MEET THE NEW PRINCIPAL . . . Henry Korsmeier, from Latah, Washington—small, and rural (Latah, that is). Basketball and football man at Whittier High and College, A.B, in 1927. Taught phys-ed and manual training at Norwalk, Calif., and then to Artesia as principal of the local high school . . . Charter member of Artesia Kiwanis, if you please.

"Married Kathryn in 1932, and shortly thereafter built their own home in Long Beach. Did some summer schooling at U.S.C. and came up with his Master in Education in '42.

"Has been scoutmaster, committeeman and councilman, so should be at home with the youngsters. Has also been presiment of the Men's Brotherhood and the adult Bible class in the Church of the Brethren. (Shake hands with Doc. Gossard, who's long been looking for a kindred soul in this wicket group).

"Henry says his hobbies are farming and woodwork, but we'll include Kathryn in that group, too. They like to camp in the High Sierras . . . Who doesn't?

"Welcome, Henry. May your stay be long and prosperous."

A LUNCH-BOX TIP

To save time and steps, save a corner of a kitchen cupboard for lunch-box equipment, say home economists who have found from experience that a "work center" saves time and steps in packing a lunch box. Stock with all the accessories which are repeatedly used, such as wax paper, hot drink cups, jelly glasses with tight-fitting lids, paper napkins, two or three mixing bowls, a meat grinder, string, a sharp knife and several spoons of assorted sizes.

Class in Nutrition Proves Popular

A six-week course in nutrition under Miss Florence Taylor, set up by the Los Angeles County Nutrition Committee, is now being offered on Monday evenings from 7 to 9 in Room 140 of the Main Building at the Pasadena Junior College. Miss Taylor's classes have been very popular for a number of years and early enrollment is suggested.

Right actions for the future are the best apologies for wrong ones in the past—the best evidence of rerget for them that we can offer, or the world receive.
Tryon Edwards.

FUTURE RAINY DAY

A government can't spend its way to prosperity. It can't continue indefinitely to put out public funds in the hope of licking a depression.

That's one of the facts that we Americans learned during the depression of the '30s. It's one of the facts that we'll have to remember when this war is over.

When war orders stop, war payrolls will stop, too. Men and women who now work on munitions jobs will have to find employment making peacetime goods. And it will take time for industry to change over its factories to the manufacture of civilian products.

All this is in the future, it's true. Our main job now is to win the war, and anything that detracts from winning the war must be put aside for the duration. But there are many things that we can do now to provide for the rainy day that is bound to come. And industry is already making plans to do them. The committee on post-war problems of the National Association of Manufacturers has worked out several suggestions that would "facilitate the readjustment and hold waste and human suffering to a minimum. They would enable us at the end of the defense effort quickly to get back to a prosperous level of peacetime production with employment and good wages for every one able and willing to work."

Among the points recommended by the N.A.M. are a reduction of taxes after the war, the elimination of all emergency wartime regulations and controls at that time, the curtailment of expenditures by private individuals during the period of the emergency, the discontinuance of all needless government spending, the development of new products, and the provision of dismissal wages for industrial employes.

FIRE FLAMES
By One of the Boys

When we learn of the sacrifices and suffering of the boys in the big battle, we feel very apologetic for anything that might have been said about sacrifice as far as serving the public as firemen. When it is said that we are glad to be of some important service, it is said for every member of the Sierra Madre Fire department.

Those of us who cannot expect to get into the armed forces can do much by continuous effort and loyalty to the fire-fighting work. Our fight will continue even after the war is over and as it has always been, we want to do a good job. There are now several men from our department in the service. The latest member to leave was Jim Heasley Jr., who joined the "Seabees" and is now at Norfolk, Va., for his preliminary training. With two sons now in, the "old man" Heasley has suddenly been attacked by the "joining fever."

Because some of the members were late for drill last meeting night our new member, Bob Smith, knows what it is to return a lot of hose to the truck. Bob is now an auxiliary fireman and a member of Bill Lee's rescue squad.

I WONDER

I wonder
If I've done this gleaming day
All that I could to stem the fray
That's fought on sea and land
To save our homes from slavery's brand
I wonder
If I've given a loyal thought
To the boys who, for me have fought
In mud and slime full knee deep
With days and nights of little sleep
I wonder
If I've sacrificed a single thing
That to their hearts would bring
A little ray of sunny light
While I'm in comfort as they fight
I wonder
If I've really tightened up my belt
So they the foe could really pelt
With a rain of shot and shell
To save we laggards from very hell
I wonder
If it isn't time to up and try
As these fateful days fast slip by
To ponder earnestly and deep
Before we are too fast asleep

ORCHIDS FOR CONGRESSMEN

By RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary, Agricultural Council of California

With Congress back on the job, and getting ready to appropriate funds to carry on the work of its essential committees, Senator Byrd's committee, which has devoted all its energies to saving money, while other Washington agencies have been solely concerned with spending it, is certainly deserving of special consideration.

For the Byrd Committee, operating on a two-year appropriation of only $20,000, has, by reason of its disclosures and recommendations, been responsible for saving the taxpayers the tremendous sum of $1,313,983,208!

Senator Byrd is frank to admit that his committee has, as yet, barely scratched the surface, but he declares that it is the purpose of his group to make all possible reductions in the expenditures of pre-war spending agencies and in the normal functions of government, so that the burden of war taxes will not become unbearable.

Such reductions as his committee will recommend, Senator Byrd emphasizes, will in no way curtail the war effort, nor will they injure any essential function of government. He and his fellow committeemen are solely concerned with eliminating waste, extravagance and duplication, and in seeing that "depression era agencies," which have outlived their usefulness, are abolished.

This committee insists—

1. That many departments in Washington are grossly overmanned; that some bureaucrats have on their payrolls more lawyers and advisers than are found necessary by the entire Government of Great Britain.

2. That telegraph and transportation charges run into astronomical figures, and that huge sums could be saved by simplifying the paper work procedure all down the line.

3. That all non-essential, prewar governmental activities of government should be cut out to relieve the pressure of war demands on the taxpayers, and that only a beginning has been made in this regard.

America, spending billions to win the war, will make any necessary sacrifice to that end—but America is getting sick and tired of paying out good money for agencies which were created to provide work during the era of depression, and which are no longer needed.

The time has come, we believe, to clean house—to do it thoroughly and effectively—and the Byrd Committee seems to be the only agency which is proceeding in that direction.

"THE NAVY WANTS YOU"
. . . to save Gas!

BIG EVENTS are shaping in the Pacific—and you can help boost them in the right direction!

More fuel oil is urgently needed for our fleet; and you can help—because when you save GAS at home, you conserve FUEL OIL for the Navy.

What has GAS got to do with FUEL OIL?

Here's an example of how the Government's Fuel Conservation Program works out: The natural gas that you use at home is the same fuel most commonly used in Southern California's teeming industrial plants. The gas you save—allows essential War Plants to use more gas for fuel, instead of having to conserve the limited reserves of fuel oil.

By using gas wisely at home, you help to release more fuel oil for the Navy.

GAS IS VITAL WAR FUEL
. . . Use it wisely!

Draft Takes 21 from Here, More Going

A complete list of the Sierra Madreans called into the armed service for the last draft quota released by the area Selective Service board at Monrovia yesteerday reveals that 21 instead of 14 men here received induction notices, though not all of them passed the physical examination. Most of those accepted have gone to induction centers and the others will leave within the next few days.

The complete Sierra Madre list contains the names of Robert H. Clark, Wilbur J. Revo, Harry L. Embree, Robert C. Lyon, Elmer J. Schencz, Albert R. Kendall, Alpha A. Webber, Jerome J. Thill, George H. Grijalva, Allen Rhodes, David T. Brooks, Deane L. Damon, Joe F. Hutak, Randal S. Cross, David L. Roess, Joseph H. Tiller, Austin L. Finch, Kenneth R. Ogg, George E. Nelson, Earl W. LaLone, Willos E. Hill.

Notices for the October quota are being prepared now, though draft board officers say they have not been informed of the exact number to be called here. It is expected, however, that the number will be almost if not fully as large as that for September. The call is for induction Oct. 22.

What They Say ---

Dave Sarnoff, pres. Radio Corp. of America, speaking in L. A.—"Radio is more of an infant today than it was 20 years ago. Our vision has widened so much we know now we have only scratched the surface."

Brig. Gen. Rob't. H. Mills, Army Dental Corps — "There's nothing temporary about Army dental fillings or artificial dentures. They're built to last!"

Warden Lewis E. Lawes, ex-warden, Sing Sing prison.—"Why should the home front be demoralized by the father draft when there are thousands of healthy, able, willing and patriotic prisoners who would give anything to get into the war?"

Grass Skirts Will Soon Be Coming In

Army exchanges, which follow American troops wherever they go, are now dealing in such items as kangaroo rugs, grass skirts, and native-made jewelry, in addition to their staple line of cigarettes, candy, soft drinks, and other home commodities. Since many of the soldiers want to send such things home, the Exchange Service buys them from the natives at a reasonable price and resells them to the soldiers. The natives were inclined to "jack up the price" on direct sales. Grass skirts sell for approximately $1.50, while a good kangaroo rug may cost $20.
